HARTFORD, KY., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1895.

NO. 12.

Over the hill to the poor house,

l came but a year ago; My head bowed down in sorrow, My sad heart filled with woe. Not one a kind word could offer As I triplged along, alone, My cyes were blinde I with tears,

And i could sigh and moan. As I wended my weary way From the spot I held so dear, To think I must never return, I couldn't make quite clear.

My heart was well nigh broken,
As I gazed on the old home scene
To leave It then forever, Scemed like an awful dream.

I fell on my knees and prayed: That God would then, and there, Give me strength to bear the builden That 'twas my lot to bear.

Yes, prayed that he would forgive The children for whom I sigh; Though over the hill to the poor

They Sent me alone to dic. Ah! children how well I love you, And long for you day by day; Yet over the hill to the poor house, thought my children would cheer As I trod down life's dark ways, And ever be near to comfort,

But you sent me homeless away, And lold me I'd better go Over the hill to the poor house, (Though the ground lay white with snow.)

Their father in his last days.

Yet God has ever watched o'er me And I praise him more, and more, And perhaps 'tis all for the best,

That you turn me from your door. May God's blessings rest upon you, Is ever your fathers paryer

And may you never suffer, The halt he has had to bear. And may your lives be happier, Than ever in the past; And when from earth you pass away

May we meet in heaven at last. Over the hill from the poor house, Where all is fair, and hight: The old man soon will be happy Out of the poor house to-night .-

DISAPPOINTMENTS. Inventive Genius Has Not Yet Sup-

pild with Promised Luxuries. The western rainmakers, who, a couple of years ago, cheered the life of the furmers of the arld regions beyond the Mississippi have given up the struggle with the clouds. It Is melancholy, imbed, that but one among them all retains any falth in the batteries that were to create storm centers which would give rain whenever desired. Even in his case Attorney at Law. the gas jars do not yet form the upper vortex, but he believes they will do it, ufter he makes more experiments. He is a dealzen of Wichlta. Kan., where rain is often needed. We like his pertinacity in the face of scolls and jeers. That kind of a LICAN Building. man often gains his end at tho last.

We are disuppointed with the flying machine men as well us with the cloud-bursters. We had great promises from the German of Frankfort, who got his wings on a year or two ago; but he is taking too long a vest to sult us. That friend of his in this town, too, who has repeatedly seat us word that he would fly as soon as he could get the money, refuses to give us uny encourgement till the capital is paid up. The St. Louis flyer, the Washington flyer and the Coney Island flyer are all awalting developments, us their predecessors wnited for them hundreds of years

We would like to see both the flylng men and the cloud-bursters successful. It will be handy to regulate the rainfall, and, by the way, we might be able for do that without n vortex if we had shoulder feathers. Of course as s ion as the wings come in, the wheel must go out.

We are always prepared to hear of the disappointment of Inventive mlads. It is only about one in a thousand of them who can make his lden go. But that one may be of more service to the world than millions of other people who never invent anything. We are not of those who seeff at every new idea. - N. Y.

A New Plan for Selecting a Superintendent.

A writer in the Richmond Pauta

The office of county superIntendent should be above party politics. Our present superintendent has made a good oue. Our schools are becoming equal to any in the State and the influence of the next superintendent in advancing or retarding this growth makes it necessary that great care he used in the selection. Our houses $63, and has sold at $75. are good and moderately well equipped and the special work of the next office should be to lead and inspire the teachers to better qualification and work, and to beget in the public greater confidence in the efficiency of the public schools.
